Villa Palma, elegant, refined retreat nesting among green lawns. This Villa was built in the seventeenth century by the Capovilla family, aristocrats from Bassano and Padua, and was enlarged in the nineteenth century by Antonio Chemin, called Palma, its namesake. It is situated in the quiet secluded area of Casoni di Mussolente. Guests are housed in an aristocratic eighteenth-century Venetian villa which has kept its old charm intact.

The portico leading into a garden with English lawns and an old stone well in the centre, has been glazed and now houses the restaurant, bar and breakfast room. However, Villa Palma's fame is dictated above all by its restaurant, "La Loggia".

Our restaurant "La Loggia" has already earned an excellent reputation. It opened in 1987 and is continually improving, thanks to the creativity of our chef and his team.

The chef always pays particular attention to the change of seasons and prepares dishes inspired by the first fruits and vegetables of each season.

Villa Palma has also twenty-one bedrooms, including one suite, eight junior suites, seven double and five single rooms. The suites and some junior suites have bath or shower with hydromassage-sauna incorporated.

Each rooms is furnished differently, but they all have a sophisticated remote control system installed on the bedside cabinet, which may be directly activated.

Personal safe, air conditioning, satellite television, minibar and double telephone: in other words, high technology in a house emanating old nobility.

"La Loggia" Restaurant is closed on Sunday evenings.
